GEORGE MILLER, HERO

Many Prostrations Due to Excessive Heat—Horrible Trolley Wreck—Sunday at Coney Island

New York, July 24.—The past week has been a chapter of discomfort and disaster, much of which is due to criminal carelessness, and the rest an old time prophet would have charged to Providence. This latter charge may seem to find foundation in the fact that the heat has been intolerable and the deaths by sunstroke more numerous than for many years, but many of the most serious accidents have been due to a criminal carelessness for which there was no excuse, and these criminals should receive the severest punishment the law can inflict.

One case was that of two trolley cars driven at a high rate of speed and in opposite directions on the same rail. This has often been tried and always with the same result. In this case it is a pleasure to record the death of both drivers, for there was no reason for driving cars at such a tremendous pace. The drivers were men of experience and both were going about 50 miles an hour. There was a sharp curve in the rail which required great care to pass in safety. Probably to show their remarkable skill to the passengers they did not slow down and the result was what might have been expected,—the wheels jumped the track and the cars shot out to death as if struck by lightning.

From this mass of guilt and misfortune comes one grand example of heroism which exalts humanity and makes atonement for many sins. An investigation has been going on this week to find out the cause of the accidents in the turrets of the battleship Georgia. The practice was being conducted on her eight-inch guns and by some means not yet discovered, a gunpowder bag caught fire while it was being carried to the gun and without an instant's warning the turret was filled with a wave of flame and a number of men were killed. On the opposite side of the turret another monster gun was loaded and ready to fire, but a young boy named George Miller observed that one corner of the powder bag was sticking out and the breach could not be closed. He knew if that powder bag caught fire that all in the turret would be killed. He did not pause but jumped forward, forced the powder bag to its place, closed the breach and thus prevented a second explosion. (Continued on Fourth Page.)

GLIDDEN TOUR

Automobilists Spend Day at Bedford Springs.

Last Sunday was a gala day at Bedford Springs. It was a day of rest for those in the Glidden Tour contests.

The cars made the run from Pittsburgh here on Saturday and began to arrive about 1 o'clock and from that time until the departure of the party Monday morning Old Bedford and The Springs were in a feverish state.

The 39 cars yet in the race were placed in a semicircle on "checking in" in the Springs meadow where they were not allowed to be touched by machinists for the purpose of making repairs, nor were they allowed to be cleaned. The cars not thus tied up were extensively made use of during Saturday evening and Sunday.

In addition to the cars in the race and the others following in the course many machines from neighboring counties were here during Sunday and the Springs lawn was a mass of people who had come from considerable distances to see the cars and the touring party.

One of the officials of the party in talking to a Gazette representative expressed himself as being more than pleased with the treatment and service at our "Garishad" and added that such was the sentiment of the party.

The entire party reached Jersey City at 12:30 on July 24, having made the run from Philadelphia—96 miles—in five and one-half hours. They crossed to New York, where in Columbus Circle the tour was officially declared ended. Mrs. Andrew Cuneo was the only woman to finish with the party although several started bravely from Philadelphia.

The Glidden trophy was again won by the Buffalo team; a Philadelphia and a Cleveland man were tied for the Howell trophy, which will be decided by a further endurance test.

Former Bedfordite Interested in Old Home Week Demonstration.

Pittsburg, Pa., July 22, 1907.

Editor of The Gazette,

Bedford, Pa.

Dear Sir:—It affords me a great deal of pleasure to become a subscriber to the Old Home Week fund, and accordingly I enclose herewith my check to cover.

The occasion will be one long to be remembered by those who may be fortunate enough to be able to participate in the festivities. The renewing of friendships, the making of new acquaintances and the reviewing of the reminiscences of past years will afford much enjoyment, aside from the excellent entertainment arranged by the energetic committee. And why should it not be so, when you trace the ancestry, with their descendants and note the achievements they have wrought, and the positions of trust occupied by them? Verily, Old Bedford County has sent her sons into various parts of the country, who have and will continue to make good reports of themselves.

Let the occasion be all that the Committee has planned for it, with my congratulations for the greatest success. Believe me

Sincerely,

J. G. Sansom.

Bill in Equity Filed

Attorneys for the H. & B. T. M. R. R. have filed a bill in equity asking that the County of Bedford be enjoined from demanding from the company the payment of any penalties imposed by the Act of Assembly of April 5, 1907, in case the Company does not comply with the provisions of the act with regard to the 2-cent-a-mile rate.

The bill also demands that the County of Bedford be perpetually enjoined from bringing any action at law to compel the company to comply with the provisions of the act.

It is maintained in the bill that the act in question is in violation of the constitution of the United States and of the state of Pennsylvania.

OLD HOME WEEK

AUGUST 4-10, 1907

Every part of the Old Home Week machinery is working without friction, and all pulling together can only mean that the Old Home Week celebration will be a great success. Each detail of the daily program has been carefully worked out by the various committees and, the weather being favorable, everything should go through with flying colors.

A Welcome to All

The first principle of an Old Home Week gathering should not be forgotten—that this is to be a reunion of the sons and daughters of Bedford county. Give each arrival a welcome as sincere as you would give a member of your own family. See that the true spirit of welcome to the "Old Home" is shown to everyone.

Place the "you've never been introduced to me" air away for a week and see how much more enjoyment you get out of life. In using this expression we do not mean "be rude," but "be cordial;" there is a difference.

A Record Breaker

The great Elks' Convention in Philadelphia was a record breaker in many respects but one of the things that impressed visitors most was the cordial reception accorded them by the people they came in contact with, although in most cases they had no completed for the Mummies' Parade, Thursday evening, August 8. The Parade Committee have spent much time in arranging the details of this event. More than 250 Mummies will be in line and this parade will be the most gorgeous pageant that the streets of the old town have ever witnessed.

There will be a King and Queen, with attendants, Knights and Courtiers, Cow Boys and Indians, Italians and Spaniards, Turks and Japs, Devils and Hobos, Pages and Clowns, Bottles and Vegetables, with scores of unique and original costumes.

The Parade will form on Juliana street in front of the public school building, and will move promptly at 8 p. m. Rooms in the public school building have been secured for dressing purposes. Clothing will be checked and cared for in the cloak rooms. All participants in the parade will assemble in these rooms between the hours of 6:30 and 7:30. Let all be prompt so that there may be no delay in the arrangements.

The representative of the Costumers will reach Bedford Wednesday morning, August 7, and at any time after 2:30 p. m. all persons holding tickets for costumes can secure same by applying to the Costumer at the Bedford Athletic Association room in formal introduction. The decorations were superb and the parades exhausted their vocabulary to fitly describe, yet the cordial greeting and hearty handshake made them feel that they were honored and welcomed guests as nothing else could do. This was one of the things especially mentioned by all who visited Philadelphia at that time.

Let each citizen decide to make Old Home Week remarkable for the same reason. A kindly word cannot be estimated on a basis of dollars and cents but it has a value far beyond these to the stranger.

Decorate Early

Make the town gay with decorations, take an interest in those you meet, see that they have a good time and make them realize that, as a town and as individuals, we are glad to see them. If you do this every one visiting Bedford during Old Home Week will always have a good word for Bedford and her people.

All decorations should be completed by Saturday, August 3, so that the first arrival for Old Home Week finds the town ready to receive them. Do not wait until Monday to decorate.

The Coming Eclipse

Everybody will be interested in observing the eclipse of the moon next Wednesday night. The moon will pass through the earth's shadow to the south of the center, consequently the whole of the disc will not be eclipsed, about one-third remaining uncovered at the time of greatest obscuration. The shadow will first appear on the left edge or limb, as the moon enters the shadow from the west, moving eastward. The shadow will pass off the disc to the left and above. About an hour before first contact with the shadow, and an hour after last contact the moon will be in the penumbra or half shadow which will appear as a dusky beginning very faint at the first contact with penumbra and gradually increasing until first contact with the umbra or shadow.

The times of the phases are as follows: Moon enters penumbra July 24, 8 o'clock, 59 m.; moon enters shadow July 24, 10 o'clock, 4 m.; middle of eclipse July 24, 11 o'clock, 22 m.; moon leaves shadow July 25, 12 o'clock, 41 m.; moon leaves penumbra July 25, 1 o'clock, 46 m. Eastern standard time. Magnitude of the eclipse—0.62 (The moon's diameter being reckoned at 1.00). A.

Reed and daughter and Miss Mary Reed.

THE URBAN MUTUAL

The Urban Mutual Insurance Company of this place was organized four years ago by Walter F. Moore and a few others familiar with the scheme of practical underwriting. The purpose in the organization of this company was to enter an effective protest against the ever-increasing rate of insurance premiums by the Stock Companies and, further, to demonstrate that people in country towns were being charged an unjust rate, either to swell the profits of the stockholders or else to bear an undue proportion of the burden of those communities where the loss ratio is heavier than in country towns.

What the Urban started out to do it has accomplished. It began business with $200,000 of insurance in force and at the end of four years, as shown by its books it had, in round numbers, insurance in force to the amount of $1,400,000.

The cost for all purposes to the assured during that period has just been two-fifths of what it would have been in stock companies, making a saving to its policy holders of sixty per cent.

The insurance departments of the several states treat the Premium Notes of Mutual Companies the same as they do the cash assets of stock companies and, on this basis, in point of financial strength the Urban is the superior of any Stock Company, as its assets equal $52.00 to every $1000 of liability, while the assets of the leading Stock Companies vary from $10.00 to $18.00 to every $1000 of liability.

The people of this community should rejoice over the success of the "Urban," because it has made a great saving to those who patronized it, because its record had the effect of keeping the stock rates from advancing to a still higher figure in this county, and because it had the effect of reducing the rates on certain lines.

It is manifest to the most unskilled that mutual insurance is bound to be cheaper, because it avoids the dividends to stockholders and the large expense to which stock companies are subjected.

Long live and prosper the Bedford "Urban."

GEORGE MILLER, HERO

Many Prostrations Due to Excessive Heat—Horrible Trolley Wreck—Sunday at Coney Island

New York, July 24.—The past week has been a chapter of discomfort and disaster, much of which is due to criminal carelessness, and the rest an old time prophet would have charged to Providence. This latter charge may seem to find foundation in the fact that the heat has been intolerable and the deaths by sunstroke more numerous than for many years, but many of the most serious accidents have been due to criminal carelessness for which there was no excuse, and these criminals should receive the severest punishment the law can inflict.

One case was that of two trolley cars driven at a high rate of speed and in opposite directions on the same rail. This has often been tried and always with the same result. In this case it is a pleasure to record the death of both drivers, for there was no reason for driving cars at such a tremendous pace. The drivers were men of experience and both were going about 50 miles an hour. There was a sharp curve in the rail which required great care to pass in safety. Probably to show their remarkable skill to the passengers they did not slow down and the result was what might have been expected,—the wheels jumped the track and the cars shot out to death as if struck by lightning.

From this mass of guilt and misfortune comes one grand example of heroism which exalts humanity and makes atonement for many sins. An investigation has been going on this week to find out the cause of the accidents in the turrets of the battleship Georgia. The practice was being conducted on her eight-inch guns and by some means not yet discovered, a gunpowder bag caught fire while it was being carried to the gun and without an instant's warning the turret was filled with a wave of flame and a number of men were killed. On the opposite side of the turret another monster gun was loaded and ready to fire, but a young boy named George Miller observed that one corner of the powder bag was sticking out and the breach could not be closed. He knew if that powder bag caught fire that all in the turret would be killed. He did not pause but jumped forward, forced the powder bag to its place, closed the breach and thus prevented a second explosion. (Continued on Fourth Page.)

GLIDDEN TOUR

Automobilists Spend Day at Bedford Springs.

Last Sunday was a gala day at Bedford Springs. It was a day of rest for those in the Glidden Tour contests.

The cars made the run from Pittsburgh here on Saturday and began to arrive about 1 o'clock and from that time until the departure of the party Monday morning Old Bedford and The Springs were in a feverish state.

The 39 cars yet in the race were placed in a semicircle on "checking in" in the Springs meadow where they were not allowed to be touched by machinists for the purpose of making repairs, nor were they allowed to be cleaned. The cars not thus tied up were extensively made use of during Saturday evening and Sunday.

In addition to the cars in the race and the others following in the course many machines from neighboring counties were here during Sunday and the Springs lawn was a mass of people who had come from considerable distances to see the cars and the touring party.

One of the officials of the party in writing to a Gazette representative expressed himself as being more than pleased with the treatment and service at our "Carlsbad" and added that such was the sentiment of the party.

The entire party reached Jersey City at 12:30 on July 24, having made the run from Philadelphia—96 miles in five and one-half hours. They crossed to New York where in Columbus Circle the tour was officially declared ended. Mrs. Andrew Cuneo was the only woman to finish with the party although several started bravely from Philadelphia.

The Glidden trophy was again won by the Buffalo team; a Philadelphia and a Cleveland man were tied for the Howell trophy, which will be decided by a further endurance test.

Former Bedfordite Interested in Old Home Week Demonstration

Pittsburg, Pa., July 22, 1907.

Editor of The Gazette,

Bedford, Pa.

Dear Sir:—It affords me a great deal of pleasure to become a subscriber to the Old Home Week fund, and accordingly I enclose herewith my check to cover.

The occasion will be one long to be remembered by those who may be fortunate enough to be able to participate in the festivities. The renewing of friendships, the making of new acquaintances and the reviewing of the reminiscences of past years will afford much enjoyment, aside from the excellent entertainment arranged by the energetic committee. And why should it not be so, when you trace the ancestry, with their descendants and note the achievements they have wrought, and the positions of trust occupied by them? Verily, Old Bedford County has sent her sons into various parts of the country, who have and will continue to make good reports of themselves.

Let the occasion be all that the Committee has planned for it, with my congratulations for the greatest success. Believe me

Sincerely,
J. G. Sansom.

Bill in Equity Filed

Attorneys for the H. & B. T. M. R. R. have filed a bill in equity asking that the County of Bedford be enjoined from demanding from the company the payment of any penalties imposed by the Act of Assembly of April 5, 1907, in case the Company does not comply with the provisions of the act with regard to the 2-cent-a-mile rate.

The bill also demands that the County of Bedford be perpetually enjoined from bringing any action at law to compel the company to comply with the provisions of the act.

It is maintained in the bill that the act in question is in violation of the constitution of the United States and of the state of Pennsylvania.

OLD HOME WEEK

AUGUST 4-10, 1907

Every part of the Old Home Week machinery is working without friction, and all pulling together can only mean that the Old Home Week celebration will be a great success. Each detail of the daily program has been carefully worked out by the various committees and, the weather being favorable, everything should go through with flying colors.

A Welcome to All

The first principle of an Old Home Week gathering should not be forgotten—that this is to be a reunion of the sons and daughters of Bedford county. Give each arrival a welcome as sincere as you would give a member of your own family. See that the true spirit of welcome to the "Old Home" is shown to everyone.

Place the "you've-never-been-introduced-to-me" air away for a week and see how much more enjoyment you get out of life. In using this expression we do not mean "be rude," but "be cordial," there is a difference.

A Record Breaker

The great Elks' Convention in Philadelphia was a record breaker in many respects but one of the things that impressed visitors most was the cordial reception accorded them by the people they came in contact with, although in most cases they had no pleted for the Mummies' Parade, Thursday evening, August 8. The Parade Committee have spent much time in arranging the details of this event. More than 250 Mummies will be in line and this parade will be the most gorgeous pageant that the streets of the old town have ever witnessed.

There will be a King and Queen, with attendants, Knights and Courtiers, Cow Boys and Indians, Italians and Spaniards, Turks and Japs, Devils and Hobos, Pages and Clowns, Bottles and Vegetables, with scores of unique and original costumes.

The Parade will form on Juliana street in front of the public school building, and will move promptly at 8 p. m. Rooms in the public school building have been secured for dressing purposes. Clothing will be checked and cared for in the cloak rooms. All participants in the parade will assemble in these rooms between the hours of 6:30 and 7:30. Let all be prompt so that there may be no delay in the arrangements.

The representative of the Costumers will reach Bedford Wednesday morning, August 7, and at any time after 2:30 p. m. all persons holding tickets for costumes can secure same by applying to the Costumer at the Bedford Athletic Association room in formal introduction. The decorations were superb and the parades exhausted their vocabulary to fitly describe, yet the cordial greeting and hearty handshake made them feel that they were honored and welcomed guests as nothing else could do. This was one of the things especially mentioned by all who visited Philadelphia at that time.

Let each citizen decide to make Old Home Week remarkable for the same reason. A kindly word cannot be estimated on a basis of dollars and cents but it has a value far beyond these to the stranger.

Decorate Early

Make the town gay with decorations, take an interest in those you meet, see that they have a good time, and make them realize that, as a town and as individuals, we are glad to see them. If you do this every one visiting Bedford during Old Home Week will always have a good word for Bedford and her people.

All decorations should be completed by Saturday, August 3, so that the first arrival for Old Home Week finds the town ready to receive them. Do not wait until Monday to decorate.

ABERDEEN'S SHIPYARDS

The Building of the Ships—A Marine Railway.

While many eastern capitalists consider that they are doing well in placing their money at four and five per cent. per annum, the western financier would scarcely consider an investment that paid him as little as eight per cent. for the reason that there are so many propositions offering more tempting returns. These days a man is indeed fortunate who owns a few shares in one of the steamers engaged in the immense lumber traffic between Aberdeen, Wash., and San Francisco. A steamer with a capacity of 750,000 feet of lumber is a big boat, worth from $75,000 to $80,000, and the stock is divided into one hundred shares. Eight hundred dollars is the par value of each share, but since these boats make the round trip between Aberdeen and San Francisco every four or five weeks, and often pay a dividend of $50 and $60 a share per trip, there is no difficulty in getting subscribers for the stock. The trouble lies rather in getting enough boats.

Most of these vessels are built on Gray's Harbor, there being two large shipyards in Aberdeen. Visiting them is an experience well worth the time of anyone unfamiliar with the sea and shipbuilding. Great sheds, which are really nothing but roofs, forty or fifty feet above ground, and supported by numerous pillars, form the necessary shelter for the work. To see one of these vessels with only the keel and ribs in place, the frame two hundred feet long by thirty feet in height, suggests the bleak skeleton of some enormous whale.

The material used is Washington fir, than which there is no better ship lumber in the world. The stern post is of Japanese oak which, by the way, is shipped in to Aberdeen cheaper than the eastern oak, but where timbers of great length are imperative eastern oak must be obtained. The inside of the vessel is sealed with great fir planks eleven inches thick making the boat's wall from twenty-four to twenty-six inches through. The beams, which extend from one side of the boat to the other and support the decks, are in turn supported by heavy bracket-shaped timbers called "knees." These are cut from the stump of the fir near the ground where the three spreads its roots that it may be more strongly anchored to the soil.

The groove in which the rudder works is called the "rudder trunk" and is made of spotted gum, a species of Eucalyptus from Australia, and one of the hardest woods known to commerce. It costs $150 a thousand feet. Iron bark is also imported from Australia at the same price—a wide band of this wood extends around the entire ship serving as a guard to protect the vessel from injury when it is moored at the dock. Iron bark is a dark-red wood with an exquisite grain, more beautiful than mahogany, but its hardness and that of working preclude its use in furniture. White pine and locust are used in filling in holes left in the hull by the thousands of bolts which contribute to the strength and rigidity of the ship. Properly caulking a vessel—that is filling its seams with oakum and pitch—is one of the most difficult operations in shipbuilding, and the caulker is one of the best paid men employed. He receives $5.50 a day.

Chicago Society Woman Who Was So Sick She Could Not Sleep, or Eat, Cured by Doan's Kidney Pills.

When a woman's kidneys go wrong, her back gives out and every little task becomes a burden. She is tired, nervous, sleepless, run down—suffers daily from backache, headaches, dizzy spells, and bearing-down pains.

Don't worry over imagined "female troubles." Cure the kidneys and you will be well. Read how to find the cure.

Marion Knight, of 33 N. Ashland Ave., Chicago, Ill., member of the Chicago Federation of Musicians and a well-known club woman, says: "This winter when I started to use Doan's Kidney Pills I ached in every bone and had intense pains in the kidneys and pelvic organs. The urine was thick and cloudy, and I could barely eat enough to live. I felt a change for the better within a week. The second week I began eating heartily. I began to improve generally, and before seven weeks had passed I was well. I had spent hundreds of dollars for medicine that did not help me, but $6 worth of Doan's Kidney Pills restored me to perfect health."

A FREE TRIAL of this great kidney medicine which cured Miss Knight will be mailed on application to any part of the United States. Address Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. Sold by all dealers; price, fifty cents per box.

full size, mapped out on the floor of the draughting room, which must be a loft of splendid dimensions. Then "molds" are made of thin fir planks which serve as a guide in shaping the enormous timbers with the band saw. Ofttimes a single beam is large enough to require a half-dozen men in its handling at the saw.

One of Aberdeen's shipyards boasts a marine railway. The track is built from the shore to the river right under the water for a couple of hundred feet. On these rails there is a truck of corresponding size. This truck is run out under the river, the vessel gets directly over it, and a powerful engine hauls in both truck and ship with chains whose links measure a foot in length, leaving the vessel high and dry, ready for such painting or other repairs as may be needed. A marine railway is but a variation of the regulation dry-dock and would not, of course, be practicable for steel-clad ocean carriers.

The Collector of Customs for Gray's Harbor is located at Aberdeen. He serves also as shipping commissioner, paying the crews of various vessels. Not long since a British barque came from Mexico and her men drew their wages, which ranged from $40 for the sailors, to $150 for some of the officers. One vigorous looking man, however, received but thirty cents. A visitor asking the collector in astonishment how the man came to appear on the pay roll for so small an amount, was told "That man shipped as cabin-boy to work his way up to Aberdeen. Since the boat's charter would not permit her carrying passengers, the law requires that every member of the crew receive compensation for his services and twenty-five cents a month is the least that can be paid, consequently this voyage of a little over thirty days meant but thirty cents for the cabin-boy." Then the collector added with a smile, "But he will be just as well off in the morning as some of the men who drew their hundred dollars, and feel a great deal better."

Dress According to Your Figure.

A woman's figure has two possibilities. It can be dressed to look its best, or it can be dressed to look its worst. Sometimes the slightest alteration in a toilet improves the effect immeasurably. For example, it is a common fault in dressing women who are stout and short to make their waists too long. If a woman is short her waist-line should be kept where it will give the greatest possible length of line from the waist-line to the bottom of her skirt. It is a mistake to put a wide girdle on a short woman, and such girdle as there is on the dress should be of the same color as the skirt, and should reach up over the waist and not down over the skirt.

A Mystery of Indo-China.

The great mystery about Indo-China and one which must ever be insoluble is the story of the lost race and the vanished civilization of that strange country. The mighty walls of Angkor-Wat, rising in the midst of sparsely settled jungles, remain as the memorial of a great empire which has utterly disappeared and is altogether lost to history. No one will ever know who planned this gigantic temple or what tyrant hounded on his myriads of people to build up those immense blocks of stone and cover them with the most elaborate of sculptures. Angkor-Wat was one of the most astonishing monuments in the world, and this forgotten temple was built so as to endure as long as the earth itself were it not for the irresistibly destructive effect of plant life on the strongest walls that man can raise. Only a highly civilized and very wealthy people could have erected Angkor-Wat, a very different race from the Anamite of modern days. The whole nation has disappeared as utterly as the busy myriads who once populated the wastes and solitudes of Memphis.—Singapore Free Press.

He Got the Trout.

A story dealing with a large trout that was rising regularly and frequently is told in "How to Fish: A Treatise on Trout and Trout Fishers." This is the story: "He was going up and down, up and down, up and down; not as the insects offered themselves, but as it suited his caprice that he should take a midge from the abundance. One youth was casting at the trout; another was looking on. Said the angler, 'I'll have that fish whether he takes it or not.' 'How?' his friend asked. 'I'll throw the fly into his mouth.' The trout went on rising; the angler went on casting. I perceived the angler's notion. It was that if he kept casting accurately and the trout continued to rise in the regular manner mentioned, the fly would be long fall at the very moment when a midge was being taken. This reckoning was justified. The large trout was hooked and landed by a fly that had been cast into his mouth."

Old Fashioned Oratory.

"We don't have no such forensic oratory as we used to have," said the old settler. "Lawyers nowadays don't orate. They only just talk."

"Take old Bill K. Simmons of Eau Claire. If Bill was defendin' a lowly chicken thief he'd speak with the tongue of angels. I'll never forget the peroration of his impassioned philippic in the Clay Bull case about the poisoned cat. It runs like this here."

The little, thin old man rose, reared back in a defiant attitude and shouted in the cracked treble of age:

"Restin' upon the couch of republican liberty as I do, covered with the blanket of constitutional panoply as I am and protected by the aegis of American equality as I feel myself to be, I despise the buzzin' of the professional insect who has just set down and defy his attempt to penetrate with puny sting the interstices of me impervious coverin'!"—New York Press.

The Log Driver.

The life of a river log driver is a life that seems to get hold of one after a year or two. You are generally wet through for twelve hours out of the twenty-four. Ten of you sleep in a 12 by 15 foot shanty; you live on fried everything, "black strap," treacle and stewed tea. You go to bed at 10 and get up at 3. You are everlastingly cursed and never praised by the foreman. Your life is in danger more or less all day long, and you never get more than $35 a month for work that is worth $100. "Then why stick at it?" you say, and all I can answer is, "Just give it a fair trial for a year, and then you'll know."—Wide World Magazine.

Is very careful about her churn. She scalds it thoroughly after using, and gives it a sun bath to sweeten it. She knows that if her churn is sour it will taint the butter that is made in it. The stomach is a churn. In the stomach and digestive and nutritive tracts are performed processes which are almost exactly like the churning of butter. Is it not apparent then that if this stomach-churn is foul it makes foul all which is put into it?

The evil of a foul stomach is not alone the bad taste in the mouth and the foul breath caused by it, but the corruption of the pure current of blood and the dissemination of disease throughout the body. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery makes the sour and foul stomach sweet. It does for the stomach what the washing and sun bath do for the churn—absolutely removes every taint and corrupting element. In this way it cures blotches, pimples, eruptions, scrofulous swellings, sores, or open eating ulcers and all humors or diseases arising from bad blood. If you have bitter, nasty, foul taste in your mouth, coated tongue, foul breath, are weak and easily tired, feel depressed and despondent, have frequent headaches, dizzy attacks, gnawing or distress in stomach, constipated or irregular bowels, sour or bitter risings after eating and poor appetite, these symptoms, or any considerable number of them, indicate that you are suffering from biliousness, torpid or lazy liver with the usual accompanying indigestion, or dyspepsia and their attendant derangements.

The best agents known to medical science for the cure of the above symptoms and conditions, as attested by the writings of leading teachers and practitioners of all the great schools of medical practice, have been skillfully and harmoniously combined in Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. That this is absolutely true will be readily proven to your satisfaction if you will but mail a postal card request to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y. for a free copy of his booklet of extracts from the standard medical authorities, giving the names of all the ingredients entering into his world-famed medicines and showing what is the most eminent medical man of the age say of them.

A Kind Examiner.

Sir John Stainer was dearly loved by the students when he was professor of music at Oxford. "As an examiner he was most considerate," said one who studied under him, "and would always do his best to get you through." I remember his asking me a poser in a viva voce examination. He waited patiently for the answer; but, partly through my nervousness no doubt, I could not think of it. At length he exclaimed testily, "Dear me, how stuffy this room is, to be sure," and he went and began tugging at the ventilator cord. It was quite two minutes before he got the thing open, and by the time he had sat down again and rearranged his gown I had the answer ready. Comparing notes later in the day with a man who was examined quite soon after me, I told him how the ventilator had served me. "How remarkable," he replied. "Why, when I was stuck he said, 'How extraordinary drafty this place is,' and spent quite two minutes in shutting the ventilator."—Manchester Guardian.

The Razor in Disrepute.

"And he told her all his heart, and said unto her, there hath not come a razor upon mine head, for I have been a Nazirite unto God from my mother's womb; if I be shaven, then my strength will go from me, and I shall become weak and be like other men."—Judges xvi, 17.

Hair on man or brute is a sign of strength. He who desires to keep at a safe distance from dentists, let him keep also at a great distance from the knife of the barber. To shave is an act against nature. Provoke nature, and in return nature will provoke you.

Said Daniel Webster: "The razor: It has taught me to curse. It has cost me more time and more trouble than all my speeches."

Rufus Choate, the lawyer, called the razor an instrument invented by Lucifer to fill up hell with barbers.

Edward Everett never used profane language, but before shaving he would invariably give vent to all sorts of French barbarisms.

Jordan Water.

There is a general impression that the Jordan water which is used at royal baptisms is taken from the sacred stream, put into a bottle, hermetically sealed and left untouched until the bottle is opened by the officiating priest. As a matter of fact, the water which flows out of the lake of Galilee and descends a rocky gorge to a level far below that of the Mediterranean is full of organic substances. If a bottle be filled with the water and kept tightly corked for a few days it turns perfectly black and offers to the nostrils all the odors of the tropics. The precaution is therefore taken of boiling the water and straining it before it is sealed up, and this is why the baptismal water always possesses the crystal clearness which one notices on these ceremonial occasions.—Modern Society.

The Undertaker's Shop.

"The one thing in New York that I can't get used to," said the country visitor. "Is the manifold uses to which undertakers put their shops. I used to be of the opinion that the only possible errand a person could have at an undertaker's was to purchase funeral supplies, but in this town I find that people go there for all sorts of purposes. They go to vote, to get married and to transact all the legal business that a 'notary public' is capable of transacting. Yesterday I even saw a party eating luncheon in an undertaker's establishment. They had come into town apparently to attend a funeral and instead of patronizing a restaurant they calmly munched their midday meal in the midst of those lugubrious surroundings."—New York Globe.

Chinese Stewards on Pacific Liners.

We sailed from San Francisco, bound for Honolulu, on a ship whose stewards and sailors are Chinamen. Even if all does not go well with the boat's motion in days of storm, one cannot fail to be entertained by these spry sons of the Orient.

The costume worn by the stewards is quite remarkable. For ordinary, everyday wear they don white garments that resemble American pajamas in their style of cut and fit. For dinner each evening and on Sundays the white suits are exchanged for light blue garments of the same description—rather an odd livery to our prosaic minds! Of course, every Chinaman preserves a habitual, solemn silence. If, owing to an interesting conversation, the passenger fails to notice the dish with which the table steward is trying to serve him the patient Chinaman stands immovable, with outstretched hand and sphinxlike countenance, until attention is drawn to him, after which, his duty done, he slips in silence on his way. Plodding, silently, the sailors attended to their duties with mournful faces that strongly appealed to me. They ate with chop sticks, sitting on their heels the while, and were, in fact, eminently satisfactory specimens in every way.—Travel Magazine.

A Hopeless Case.

A Scottish paper tells a story of an old Scottish woman who was "unco' dronthe," without the money to buy "a drapple." "Lassie," she said to her little granddaughter, "gang round to Donald MacCallum and bring me a gill. Tell him I'll pay him in the morning."

Back came the child with a refusal. Donald declined to part with his whisky without the cash. Eager and irritated, the old woman cast about for some means of "raising the wind," and her eye fell upon the family Bible. "Here, lassie," she said, "gie him this and tell him to keep it until I bring him the siller." Off went the little girl, but she soon returned, still carrying the Bible. Donald was obdurate. "He says he munn hae the baubees first, granny."

In anger the disappointed grandmother threw up her hands and exclaimed: "Losh, did onybody ever hear the like o' that! The man will neither tak my word nor the word o' God for a gill o' whusky!"

A Canine Shirk.

Rex, a thoroughbred Spitz, must perform the painful duty of escorting a certain neighbor home when she has been calling at our house. However, it is not without a show of reluctance that he does it. Recently our friend missed her escort, and no amount of whistling proved equal to recalling him. This occurred several times and it was always in about the same place that Rex disappeared. One night our friend determined to discover Rex's little game. After whistling and calling she made a pretense of going on. She stopped in a deep shadow. Around the corner of the nearest house appeared a slinking figure. Stealthily quitting the shadows Rex crept out and peered long and anxiously up the street, whistling, as he well knew, he should have continued to conduct the lady. After this he turned shamelessly around and lit out for home.—Chicago Tribune.

Baby's Share of Blame.

She had been fitted for two gowns, the total cost of which was nearly $900.

"Now," she said to the saleswoman, "I want you to do me a favor."

"Certainly," was the prompt response.

The customer colored deeply. "I want you to make out the bill partly for gowns and partly for baby dresses and a baby's cloak."

The saleswoman was used to the whims of fashionable women, but this was something she was a little slow in comprehending. The customer explained.

"You see," she said, "my husband is very fond of our baby, and if he sees that the bill is partly for dresses for her—well, he won't mind so much."—Exchange.

Useful Hints

Remember that bones, scraps and tough pieces of meat, as well as carcasses of chicken and turkey, may be used in making soup stocks. Small portions of fresh vegetables add much to the seasoning of the stock.

A paste of salad oil and salt is said to remove the white marks on polished trays or tables occasioned by placing upon them heated dishes. The mixture should be spread lightly over the stain, and allowed to remain an hour. It may then be removed with a soft, dry cloth, and the discoloration will vanish with it.

An attractive centerpiece can be made for the table by using a low, wide, green dish from which arise daffodils or tulips, their stems being supported by the heavy metal stem holders which come for this purpose. These holders may be had in the shape of a turtle, and can be bought at large Japanese shops.

If you are storing your household effects for an indefinite period, wrap all table and bed linen, or, in fact, any white material, in dark blue paper to prevent it from turning yellow.

An Earnest Trifler.

By Constance D'Arcy Mackay.

Copyrighted, 1907, by P. C. Eastment.

"What an age it is since I've seen you!" said Branton Ridgely, turning with enthusiasm to Eleanor Grayson. The pink skirted candles on Mrs. Courtney's dinner table cast a glow across the pale oval of Miss Grayson's face. From under her dark, delicately arched brows her hazel eyes looked out on the world with starry seriousness.

"The last time we met," he went on, "was at the Van Nestor's tennis tournament on the 17th of September."

Miss Grayson laughed. "What a memory for dates! I suppose you also recall each bit of our conversation?"

"Every word. Do you remember calling me a trifler?"

"Did I? Well, I recollect your telling me that I was an erratic, headstrong young woman. That was two months ago, and I don't think either of us have changed much since."

"I accept the rebuke," said Ridgely meekly.

"Isn't it a pity to waste such good material? Instead of a leader of collations you might be a leader of men."

"And isn't it a pity to hide yourself from your friends and stay in that settlement, toiling and striving?"

"And enjoying it more than anything I've ever done before," supplemented Miss Grayson warmly.

"That's all very well, but how am I ever to catch a glimpse of you? I was just beginning to know you last summer, and now your time is taken up morning, noon, and night, and you haven't a moment to give me."

"You'll find," he predicted savagely, "by falling in love with one of the workers down there—unless you're already interested in some one else."

"Such frankness merits frankness in return. I am deeply interested in some one. But your first surmise was wrong. The hero in this case is quite unknown. I've never even seen him."

"Never mind," growled Ridgely, "he'll show himself soon enough when he's found you've begun to care."

"Well, then, he'll have to change his present tactics," answered Miss Grayson lightly. "Do you know, it's the most mysterious thing! Each week through the mail I've been receiving an envelope filled with paper money. Inclosed is a printed note which says, 'For the needy,' and it's signed 'E. T.'"

"Strange," murmured Ridgely. "Yes, and there's more!"

"More?"

"I mean each day there's a bunch of violets, too, and the same initial on the card."

"The deuce!" said Ridgely. "Well, and what then?"

"Then? Oh, there's nothing more. The flowers continue to come, and though I have no clue as to who E. T. is, I continue to accept both."

"How do you know he's a man?"

"What woman would be so systematic?"

"True. And do you wear the flowers he sends?"

"Sometimes."

"Lucky dog! He's to be envied!"

"That's so like you, Mr. Ridgely, to think of the flowers first and forget all about the money that has made it possible for me to carry out one of my pet schemes. This week Miss Elliston and I have rented and renovated a house—number 12 Pearl street, and we're going to live there and run it to suit ourselves."

"Alone?"

"Why, of course!"

"Well, to say it's madness is inadequate. In that quarter of the city—regular slums! If you had parents!"

"I shouldn't be doing it? Probably not. As it is, my friends have expostulated in vain, for I am quite capable of taking care of myself. And I see no reason why I shouldn't make experiments and do as I please. Besides, Miss Elliston and I aren't altogether alone. We have a very competent German servant, Grochen. And I'm sure the man who sends the money would be delighted to see to what use we've put it. We have only been in the house a week and have an inmate already—such a piteous case, a little Italian girl whose stepfather, Grimaldo, forced her to work in a cigar factory, though she was so ill she could scarcely stand. Grimaldo used to beat her if her earnings didn't please him. If you could have seen her poor arms—so wasted and pinched black and blue! Of course it was a case for the societies, but I didn't wait for them to interfere. I took her in myself. I wanted to see those olive cheeks of hers grow rounded out and rosy, and those scrawny brown hands—do you know, she looks as if she'd gained pounds already! Her eyes are beginning to lose their haggard look, and she doesn't duck her head as if she expected a blow."

"And her stepfather?"

"Grimaldo? Oh, he's disappeared! We won't have any more trouble with him, I fancy. There! I've bored you with talking about myself, but it's going to end, for I am taking the privilege of excusing myself and leaving early." Mrs. Courtney is a lenient hostess!

"You'll let me put you into your cab?" said Ridgely.

"I would if I expected to take one, but I'm going back to Pearl street via the friendly street car. It drops me within three blocks of the door."

"Three blocks! Oh, I say, Miss Grayson, won't you let me!"

"Thank you, no! I shall be perfectly safe. I've come and gone at my own free will for the last week. The people down there are too busy minding their own affairs to interfere with mine."

A few moments later, swathed in a long dark coat that fitted closely and hid the folds of her dinner gown, Miss Grayson hailed a crosstown car. It was a cloudy evening that threatened rain, and before she reached her destination the storm broke wildly, the great drops falling in gusts against the car windows. The corner at which Miss Grayson alighted was utterly deserted. Pale gleams from half opened tenement shutters and the dim, murky yellow of the street lamps were reflected in the streaming gutters and the sidewalk's miniature pools. Miss Grayson splashed briskly ahead, looking neither to the right nor to the left, till she neared her own abode and turned her head to glance in the windows. The partition of what had once been a narrow hall had been removed, and the whole was turned into a spacious sitting room. The embers of a half spent grate fire threw a softened color over books and pictures, and the dark, thin face of little Tessa, who was seated on the hearth rug.

"Well, Tessa," called Miss Grayson, opening the door and pausing a moment to wrest the key from the reluctant lock. "Did you sit up for me?"

And where's Miss Elliston?"

But Tessa's slow, sweet voice was checked midway in reply, for of a sudden Miss Grayson was thrust violently into the room, and the half opened door was closed behind her. Against it leaned the threatening figure of Grimaldo, his lips to an ugly line.

"What do you mean by breaking in like this?" demanded Miss Grayson, sternly quiet, though a pulse beat hurriedly in her throat.

Grimaldo fixed his narrow eyes on her. Angry red surges under the brownish pallor of his skin. She had taken his daughter, he said, his daughter who earned for him. Now he had come to fetch Tessa away. She would not be found a second time.

Tessa was staring at a window at the other end of the room as if she did not hear Grimaldo's words, but Miss Grayson's eyes were on the thin, keen knife that flickered in his hand.

"If the lady screams or calls the police, I strike now," said Grimaldo softly, with a threatening gesture.

"Oh, no you don't!" cried Branton Ridgely, crashing in the window with his walking stick and vaulting over the sill with the jump that had won him a medal at college. Beyond were the amberlike lamps of his waiting hansom, the cabman whistling shrilly for the police. Miss Grayson saw as through a maze the things that followed, Ridgely's arm striking out and Grimaldo sprawling. She heard Tessa's cry of relief, the startled voice of Miss Elliston, who paled stricken, was descending the stairs. Lastly came the police. It was Ridgely who told them the necessary details, it was Ridgely who calmed the excited Miss Elliston and half hysterical Tessa; it was Ridgely who came to Miss Grayson when it was all over with a fervent "Thank heaven, I was in time."

"How did you know?"

"Why, after you were gone I felt a premonition, so I took a cab and followed."

Miss Elliston had discreetly turned her back. Miss Grayson lifted a bunch of violets from a bowl on the table and held them out to him.

"Instead of laurels," she began tremulously.

"I couldn't—I can't—you see—that is"—stammered Ridgely, coloring to the roots of his hair.

"Their effect?"

"Oh," cried Miss Grayson, with a deep breath, "then it was you who sent them! And the money too?"

"But the initials?" she questioned, perplexed.

"Stand for 'Earnest Trifler,'" he said lightly. "I thought I'd like to help, but I'm pretty much of a thick headed blunderbuss and didn't quite know how. You see a trifler wouldn't stand much of a chance with you, would he, Miss Grayson?"

"An earnest trifler would," she answered, looking down at the violets she still held in her hand.

"Really?" cried Ridgely, with a delight half boyish in its impetuosity.

"Yes, really," said Miss Eleanor Grayson in a tone that made Ridgely's heart skip at least three beats.

Hustling Zebediah.

By LUCY STEWART.

Copyrighted, 1907, by E. C. Parcells.

"Jabez Strong, I'm not going to stand this thing another day!"

"Shoo, ma, how you talk!"

"And you've got to help me."

The cows had been milked, the hogs fed, and Jabez Strong, farmer, had taken his seat beside his wife on the veranda. He didn't ask what it was she would not stand, for the matter had been the subject of numerous conversations before. He had always assumed a neutral position and argued that things would come out all right if left alone, but now he realized that a crisis had arrived.

"If she had a mother it would be different," continued the good wife as she fanned away the mosquitoes with a folded paper, "but she hasn't one. She's only got a father, and he's the biggest old poke in six counties. Jest the last thing Melvina Williams said to me on her dying bed was to be a mother to Emeline, and now I'm going to be or know the reason why. I'm going to call her over here tomorrow for a talk, and I'm going to have a talk with Zebediah. It ain't right, and you can't make it right."

"It allus makes things wuss to mix in," answered her husband after a minute.

"It might if Emeline had a mother, but she hasn't got I've let it go on and on, thinking mebber I hadn't better say nothing, but I shan't let it go another day. I may want you to help me. If I do, you've got to pitch right in."

Across the highway from Farmer Strong's was the farmhouse of Farmer Williams. The two families had been neighbors for fifteen years. Farmer Williams was a good man, but it was also true that he was a "poke." That is, he worked from morning till night, and then after reading his county paper for half an hour he wound up the clock and went to bed. When his wife had died, she left a daughter Emeline, eighteen years old. That was two years before the opening of this story. Just about that time Zebediah Henderson had been taken on as a hired man. Zeb was twenty-three years old and well thought of, but he was slow and conservative by nature.

Some hired men would have fallen in love with Emeline inside of a week, for she was a bright, attractive country maiden, but Zeb waited three months. It came to be a case of love on both sides, and three months later he proposed and was accepted. It stopped short at that, so far as Zeb was concerned. He meant to marry some day, but that day was indefinite. Farmer Williams came to know of the engagement, but he had no opinion to express. He went on with his plowing and eating boiled dinners and left matters to fate.

It was this state of affairs that had provoked the indignation of Mrs. Strong. She didn't think it right on the part of Zebediah to keep Emeline "on the hooks," as she expressed it. While all other young men were driven away by knowledge of the engagement, Zebediah continued to "poke around" as if he had fifty years to get married in. On one or two occasions when he had come over to borrow a hoe or sit on the veranda and discuss crops with her husband, she had spoken her mind pretty plainly. She had hinted that she knew of farmers' sons who were looking about for wives and that there were more windmill and wire fence men coming along than she could shake a stick at, but Zebediah was unmoved. She had made Emeline own up to the engagement, and she had advised her not to make a long engagement of it, but when the girl blushing asked her what she could do Mrs. Strong had no plan at hand and didn't know where she was to get one.

Fortune favors the conspirator as well as the brave. Two or three days after her talk with her husband on the veranda Mrs. Strong's brother came on a visit from Illinois. He was a jovial, hustling young man. If he hadn't had a sweetheart back home he would have fallen in love with Emeline Williams. It was while he was, praising her that Mrs. Strong got her plan. It was as simple as sliding down a cellar door. She crowed and giggled over it for half an hour and was still crowing and giggling when the girl from across the road came over to borrow a drawing of tea. Mrs. Strong brought out the tea and then motioned her pretty neighbor to take a chair and began.

"Emeline Williams, you have no mother?"

"No?"

"Your mother asked me to be a mother to you after she was gone?"

"I know it, and you've been awful good to me."

"Emeline, it's a dreadful thing for a girl to be in love and have no mother and an old poke of a father, and I can't stand it any longer. I've got to be your mother and advise with you."

"But father is kind and good, and Zeb is—is?"

"Zeb is what? Been engaged for a year and a half, and he hasn't asked you to set the day yet. He may go another year and a half. He may go five years. You can't tell nothing about such a critter. He'll keep poking about till he's bit by a rattlesnake or falls off the roof of a barn. I'm going to talk to you jest as if you were my daughter. Something's got to be done."

"I—I can't do anything," stammered the girl as she turned her face away to hide the color.

"But you can, and you're going to. That's where you need a mother; that's where a mother's plans come in. If I had five daughters I'll bet I'd marry the last one of 'em off in two years. Now, Emeline Williams, stop twiddling your thumbs and blushing and hitching around and listen to me."

And inside of ten minutes, she had developed her plan and guaranteed its successful working. There were objections, but she overruled them. There were protestations, but she silenced them. Half an hour after the girl had run back home with her tea the plan had been communicated to Bert, Mrs. Strong's brother, and entered upon in the heartiest manner. He had been introduced to the Williams household, and, following out the plan, he crossed the road and spent four hours talking to Emeline on the veranda. Zebediah saw them from the cornfield. During the first hour he was easy in his mind. During the second he wondered a bit. Before the third was ended he was feeling the gnawing pangs. He came up to supper sullen and morose, and now and then during the evening he flung out something about "that squirt from Illinois."

Bert came the next day and the next. He also came in the evening. He almost ignored Zeb, while he made every effort to entertain Emeline. He even aroused her father from his wonted lethargy, but fear of the law restrained him. He wanted to talk to the girl and tell her what was what, but pride forbade. He was mad and jealous, but there seemed nothing for him to do. He lay in his bed one night thinking things over and gritting his teeth and wondering why girls made fools of themselves, when Farmer Strong toused him up and told him he'd better go to the barn and see if the horses were all right. Farmer Strong thought he had seen some one prowling around. A trip to the barn showed that the gray horse and top buggy were missing. When the Williams household was alarmed, the discovery was made that Miss Emeline was not in her room. Her wardrobe had been overhauled and she had evidently fled. The discovery was not a minute old when Mrs. Strong came over to report that her brother was missing.

"By gum, but it's an elopement!" exclaimed Zebediah as he made for the barn. "It's an elopement, and I'll kill that squirt from Illinois if I have to follow him to Africa."

There was another horse in the barn, and, waiting only long enough to slip on a bridle, Zeb mounted and was off for the nearest village. As he went clattering through the midnight darkness he saw red. In his heart he was a murderer ten times over. He did not have to go to the village. Three miles from home he met a boy driving the old gray mare homeward. He had been paid half a dollar by the "squirt" to do so after the young man had taken the train. The boy was positive that there was no one with him. The old mare was put on the gallop for home, and the farmhouse was reached to find the father and daughter at the gate. Emeline had explained that she had sat up late living over a dress and had finally gone up to the garret to hunt for some pieces of cloth. Elope? She had never even dreamed of it. In love with the young man from the west? She couldn't say she even liked him.

At this point Mrs. Strong came into the discussion to say that her brother was very erratic and sometimes did strange things and that when he took sudden resolves to go home he sometimes borrowed even a horse and buggy without consulting the owner. She hadn't heard him say he was going home, but he didn't always let her into his confidence. Zeb heard her out and then climbed into the buggy.

"Where are you going?" asked the farmer.

"After Jim Smith, the justice."

"What for?"

"There's going to be a wedding here in less'n an hour."

And there was, and though the groom was grouchy for awhile he soon got over it and acknowledged that he was glad of it—that is, he was glad he had married five or six years sooner than he had intended to, but if the "squirt" ever returned to that neighborhood let him look out for a broken neck.

MEETING OF TEACHERS

The gathering together of the teachers of the county, past and present, during Old Home Week promises to be a pleasant feature of the festive week. Those who have filled the office of County Superintendent since 1869—Fisher, Hughes, Cessna, Potts and Wright—are all living and the majority of them will be present to greet old friends during the week.

The program for the occasion, published elsewhere in this issue, will prove interesting, and every teacher in the schools of the county should be present.

THE BEAUTY CONTEST

The voting contest for Queen of the Carnival, which closed yesterday at noon and which resulted in the election of Miss Margaret Shuck of Bedford, was one of exceptional interest. The hills and valleys of the county were traversed in search of coupons. It would be difficult to find a handful of copies of any county paper without a significant blank telling the story of the removal of coupons.

The rivalry ran high throughout the past few weeks and was exceptionally interesting during the closing hours.

CLEANING UP

The work of cleaning up is still going on both on the streets and on private property and the strokes of many paint brushes are making bright weather-beaten buildings. But this is not the time to rest from our labors. Let the good work go on until many more improvements are made. There is yet time in which much may be done.

When the work of cleaning up is finished the work of decorating should be vigorously pushed forward. Let the emblem of our nationality be displayed on every building of the town. Let the town present an appearance worthy of her history!

VOTE FOR HARMAN

The following from the editorial page of yesterday's Philadelphia Record is significant and strikes squarely at the problem that confronts the people of the state:

The Democrats are going to run their campaign on the commandment, "Thou Shalt Not Steal," but we don't see what that has to do with John Oscar Sheatz.—The Press.

John Oscar will not steal nor contrive a way for stealing, but he is put in nomination for the State Treasurership by the party responsible for the officials who permitted the looting of the Treasury and for the rascals who got the money. Is it wise to keep the Penrose-McNichol Organization in power by letting it come in out of the wet under John Oscar's umbrella? Is it safe? Ought the voters of the state to practically condone the costly treachery of the past five years by again making the Board of Public Grounds and Buildings a safe cover for premeditated assault on the State Treasury?

What is most needed is a "check" on the way things are done at Harrisburg and this "check" can only be from the opposition party in the shape of a fearless and an honest man. Such a person is the Democratic candidate for State Treasurer, John G. Harman.

The election two years ago of William H. Berry proved most satisfactory to all honest and thinking voters and most beneficial to the state. Had he been defeated the gigantic loot which the gang papers tried so hard to conceal would not be known; there would have been no investigation. As the election of Berry brought about the exposure of gang methods, so the election this fall of John G. Harman will prevent further steals.

He was a member of the Reformed church.

Mr. Diehl was married to Miss Sarah Pickering, who died about 14 years ago. Four children preceded him to the world beyond and the following survive: Francis M., Sophia, wife of D. F. Morehead who, with two children, Wilbert Earl and Sylvia Edna, survive. Mrs. Jacob Long of St. Clairsville and Ella Bowser of Claysburg, sisters, also survive.

Funeral services were held Monday afternoon at St. Paul's church, Imier, conducted by Rev. J. W. Zehring. Mrs. Morehead united with the Reformed church at the age of 12 years. She was a strong Christian character, always loving and kind and highly esteemed in the community.

Frank M. Rock

We glean the following from a letter written by C. S. Crisman of Denver, Colo., to Dr. W. A. Grazer of New Paris: "I was at the County Hospital to see Frank Rock. He is the poorest mortal I ever saw yet is perfectly sensible. He told me his time was short here and hoped it would come—I will be better off. This has been coming on for about two years." He was in the hospital two months. He died at 3 a. m. July 13, and was interred in the Fairmount cemetery." The deceased was born near New Paris March 18, 1866, and was therefore aged 41 years, three months and 25 days. He went west several years ago and was engaged in mining and contracted what is known as miner's consumption. Fred J. Rock of near New Paris, a brother, Mrs. N. E. Kegg of California, a sister, and Mrs. M. R. Otto of Schellsburg, a half sister, and George B. Sleek of Windber, a half brother, survive him. Caj. New Paris, Pa.

Man's Ruling Wish

There is one wish ruling over mankind, and it is a wish which is never in a single instance granted—each man wishes to be his own master. It is a boy's beatific vision, and it remains the grownup man's ruling passion to the last. But the fact is life is a service. The only question is, Whom shall we serve?—W. F. Faber.

Superlatives

Dr. Johnson says in his "Grammar of the English Tongue," "The comparison of adjectives is very uncertain and, being much regulated by commodiousness of utterance, is not easily reduced to rules."

Then he quotes passages from "Paradise Lost" in which the words "virtuousness" and "powerfulness" are found and a passage from "Samson Agonistes" which contains the word "fameousness."

which might have destroyed that mighty vessel and involved her crew in ruin.
This frightful destruction was presented by this youthful Demi-God. He paid a tremendous price for his devotion to duty and his indomitable courage, but his glorious act will remain an example among humanity's richest heroisms for all time—worthy to stand beside that of the noble Roman who dashed into the Tiber defying Hannibal's advancing legions, Napoleon on the Bridge of Lodi or Leonardo with what he called the immortal Greeks he drove back Cyrus and his multitude of Persians. The instant that the brave boy closed the cannon's breech he was enveloped in a wave of fire, and his death was the most painful and terrible.

It is on just such sacrifices that the safety of the nation depends; such devotion and courage are Honor's sword and shield. It's only a short time since the mortal remains of Paul Jones, one of freedom's champions a hundred years ago, were brought from their foreign resting-place in one of our noblest ships, to the land he loved, whose battles he fought and whose liberty he helped to achieve, and they gave his dust entombment at Annapolis, where our sons are trained to defend the glory of our flag. There let the ashes of George Miller, the young hero of the Georgia, rest with our naval uncanonized saints.

Sunday, July 21, was a field day at Coney Island; the torrid heat all through the week kept thousands away from the delightful resort, but Sunday was mild and clear—just the day that Coney Island loves. The rush came early and for many hours every avenue that led to the seashore was crammed to suffocation; all day the briny waves were filled with bathers. Fortunately for the comfort of the visitors, the hotels and restaurants laid in a full supply of eatables; but early in the evening food and drink became scarce and boiled bologna could not be had for love or money. It was an enjoyable day; the crowd was well policed and Coney Island was at its best.

Agreeably Surprised

George H. Mortimore, a well-known and highly respected citizen of Belden, was the recipient of a very pleasant surprise Friday evening. Mr. Mortimore retired at an unusually early hour, but his peaceful slumbers were soon arrested by S. S. Diehl, who told him that his presence was needed elsewhere. On entering the drawing-room, Mr. Mortimore was confronted by seventy-four of his invited friends, who gave him the most complete surprise ever contributed. He quickly gained control of his faculties and extended a cordial greeting to all present.

Mr. Mortimore has ever been a potent factor in the social affairs of his community. He has always taken an active interest in the social phase of life, and his neighbors and friends took this opportunity to manifest their appreciation of his untiring efforts and unselfish devotion. Refreshments were served in the dining room and on the lawn. At a late hour all returned home wishing Mr. Mortimore many happy returns of the day.

EXPERIMENTAL ORCHARDS

Two Plots Selected in This County for State Work.

The agricultural department at State College, by a recent act of Congress known as the Adams Act, received an increased appropriation, part of which is now being used for investigation in practical orchard work. In each fruit-growing county or section throughout the state, four and eight-acre plots in separate orchards are being put in, the grower and orchard, of course, being suitable.

Bedford county now has both experiments in operation. The four-acre plot, called a fertilizer experiment, where the common fertilizers as found on the market are used, was put in the orchard of S. B. Brown above Sulphur Springs. The trees are seventeen years of age. The eight-acre experiment was placed in the young orchard of Joseph Slick on Chestnut Ridge, near New Paris, the soil and subsoil being gravel, one of the best orchard soils in the county. The latter method is a tillage experiment. The ground of two acres is plowed in the spring, cultivated once every ten days or two weeks until the last of July, called clean tillage. The second two acres are tilled until the last of July then sown to a clover crop. The third two acres has the crop of grass cut and thrown around under the limbs, known as the mulch system, and in the fourth two acres the grass is taken off entirely. Then running across the same experiment two acres is covered with 12 tons of barnyard manure to the acre, and parallel to this two acres more receive 20 pounds of fertilizer composed of a mixture of nitrogen, acid rock and muriate of potash. This gives us a double experiment and will surely give some valuable results and answer some very important questions in orchard culture.

Another experiment is contemplated by Prof. John P. Stewart in charge of the investigation, to whom all inquiries should be addressed. His idea is for the owner of the ground to furnish the ground and trees, the station to plant them, furnish advice as to varieties and culture, and furnish all fertilizers used. Any one wishing to have the experiment placed with him should write Prof. Stewart at State College.

Every fruit grower should visit these places and become thoroughly acquainted with the details and carefully watch the results. This will solve some of the problems about orchard culture, and each individual will get results according as he takes observation.

I would like to remind you of the meetings of the Bedford County Fruit Growers' Association held in the court house the last Saturday of

WASHINGTON LETTER

Communication From Our Regular Correspondent

NAVAL MOVES IN EAST

The Korean Empire Toppling—The Attitude of Japan—The Trail is Leading to the Capital.

Washington, D. C., July 23.—There are more naval moves in the far east. Now it is semi-officially announced that the cruiser squadron of Admiral Dayton's fleet is about ready to start home, and it may come by way of Japan. This squadron consists of four ships, the West Virginia, the Colorado, the Pennsylvania and the Maryland. They are the newest and most powerful of the armored cruisers. It is said that they are coming eventually to San Francisco. It is optional with the Admiral on the Pacific station whether they come by way of the Japanese ports or not. If they did, it might be taken by the Japanese as rather flaunting a red rag at a bull. But it might be a wholesome object lesson at the same time. It is understood that after leaving the far side of the Pacific, they will go to the Straits of Magellan and join in the target practice with the battleship squadron. After that, they will make their way up the coast and the whole fleet will concentrate at San Francisco.

There is some interest in the State Department over the news from Korea of the abdication of the emperor, Yi-Hyung. The way that this bears on the American situation is that it is apt to divert the Japanese populace from their intense interest in all events in America and particularly on the Pacific coast.

The Korean Empire has been toppling for a long time, and this is as good a time to give it the final shove as any. The big peninsula, for it is a great territory, has been the scene of misrule, conquest, and reconquest for ages. For many generations back there has never been a Korean Emperor who has died in his bed. He either abdicated, as the present one has done, or else he was assassinated, or sometimes it was both.

There has been no question that the Japanese have had their eyes on the country from the first of their successes against the Russians in the late war. They need the territory, they care nothing for the several million natives, and the natives have been so badly ruled and so thoroughly robbed by successive governments, that they care little who their rulers are, believing that whatever change may come, they have known and endured the worst.

In this emergency the Japanese government found its hands full in the row not with the United States, but with its own people, to keep them from picking a fight with the United States. The Korean plum was about ripe for the picking, and the Japanese government simply gave the tree a shake and is now watching the eyes of the Japanese people turn Korea-ward, which is a much safer direction than toward the United States. There is an old saying that a hound can only follow one trail at a time. It is generally believed at the State Department that the hound being diverted is the Japanese public, and that the trail is toward the Korean capital.

SHORT TALKS BY L. T. COOPER.

INTERNAL PARASITES.

Cooper's New Discovery has taught me many things. Not least of which is that parasites of the tape worms as they are called are responsible for an immense amount of suffering.

Thousands of these creatures have been brought to me by people who have taken the New Discovery and I now know that an immense amount of supposed stomach trouble is caused in reality by one of these parasites. A man or woman may be afflicted in this manner for years and not realize the true cause of their suffering. When I first sold Cooper's New Discovery I did not know that the medicine would remove this trouble. I have since found that it invariably does so. The following letter is a fair sample of the symptoms as experienced by an individual thus affected:

"I was always tired. My stomach bloated and the slightest exertion made me sick, weak and dizzy. My appetite was variable and a good night's sleep was unknown to me. When I awoke in the mornings I had a bad taste in my mouth and a coated tongue. I heard of the wonderful benefits that were being derived from Cooper's New Discovery, and decided to try it."

"The horrible tape worm, sixty feet long that had been sapping my life away, passed from my system alive and squirming after I had taken three doses. Now I have a splendid appetite, every trace of stomach trouble has disappeared and my digestion is good. I sleep well and am gaining in strength every day." A Freshman.

A freshman who had entered one of the large universities and was not much accustomed to the ways of institutions of learning or of cities was returning late one evening from a lecture. When near his lodgings he was halted by two masked men, who "held him up" in true metropolitan style. One of the men leveled the conventional revolver at the young man, while the other relieved him of his watch, pocketbook and other valuables. He made no mention of the matter to anybody at the time, but a few days later he reported it to the president of the university.

"It wasn't a great deal," he said, "but it was more than I like to lose, and I think it's an outrage to treat a boy that way."

"Why didn't you tell me of this sooner?" asked the president.

"I supposed they would bring the things back to me next morning," he answered. "It was a couple of sophomores hazing me, wasn't it?"—Youth's Companion.

Weary Watches.

"I suppose," said the watchmaker, "you do not know that watches, like human beings, sometimes don't go for the very good reason that they are tired. Sometimes a watch is brought to me which is all right. Nothing about it is out of order, and it is fairly clean. When it becomes sulky and refuses to go except by fits and starts the best thing to do is to lay it aside and give it a rest. The mechanism in a 'tired' watch seems to be in perfect condition, but it won't work. The fact is that long and faithful service has thrown it slightly out of adjustment in perhaps ten different places. Scraping and cleaning and readjusting a fine watch is the worst thing that could be done to it. A month's rest will instead cause the works slowly to readjust themselves, and at the end of that time after careful oiling the watch will go as cheerfully as ever."—Washington Star.

Big Game Birds.

The capercailzie, or "black game bird of Norway" is one of the largest species of game birds in the world, being very hardy and frequently attaining a weight exceeding fifteen pounds, but when the birds are young they are easy prey of hawks. The birds are what are known as "rangers" for the reason that while in quest of food they cover a wide expanse of territory. During periods of heavy snowfall they burrow into the snow and remain until the storm subsides before venturing out again. Their food in winter consists chiefly of birch buds, and in summer they catch mice and other small animals. They are rated as members of the grouse family and in habits are much like the partridge.—Forest and Stream.

Noses of Great Men.

Prominent noses seem to have been the property of many great men. Lycurgus and Solon had noses six inches in length, and Ovid was nicknamed Naso on account of his large nose. Scipio Nasica derived his name from his prominent olfactory organ, and Alexander the Great and Cardinals Wolsey and Richelieu all had large noses. On the medals of Cyrus and Artaxerxes their noses seem clear out to the rim of the coin. Washington's was the true aquiline type, indicative of firmness and patience, as was the nose of Julius Caesar. Mohammed had a singular nose. It was so curved that a writer has told us that the point of it seemed continually striving to insert itself between his lips. The noses of Franklin, Shakespeare and Dr. Johnson all had wide nostrils, betokening strength and love of thought. The nose of Napoleon was exquisitely though firmly chiseled. He often said, "Give me a man with plenty of nose." Frederick the Great had so large a nose that Lavater offered to wager that blindfolded he could tell it among 10,000 by merely taking it between his thumb and forefinger.

The Fly That Buzzed For Mendelssohn.

The following story is told of the music of the overture to "A Midsummer Night's Dream." While Mendelssohn was deep in the making of this same fine overture he went riding one day with a friend. In order, after awhile, to rest their horses the two boon companions dismounted and stretched themselves out under the shade of a great tree. Suddenly there came an excited "Hush!" from the great composer, who half arose very cautiously. A large fly was buzzing over them, and Mendelssohn was anxious to catch the true sound of the insect's hum as it gradually drifted farther away. Many days later when the overture had been completed the artist called his friend's attention to that passage in progression where the violoncello modulates in the chord of the seventh of the descending scale from B minor to F sharp minor. "There, that's the fly that buzzed past us at Schonhausen," said Mendelssohn.

The Reason For It.

"No," said the imbibed person, "when I want financial assistance I go to strangers. I do not ask friends or relatives."

"Well," answered the logical man, "maybe that's the best way. Friends and relatives are in a position to keep posted on a man's record."—Washington Star.

PAIN

Pain in the head—pain anywhere, has its cause. Pain is congestion, pain is blood pressure—nothing else usually. At least so says Dr. Shoop, and to prove it he has created a little pink tablet. That tablet—called Dr. Shoop's Headache Tablet—coaxes blood pressure away from pain centers in the head, and the result is a refreshing, gentle, safe, and sure equalizes the blood circulation.

If you have a headache, it's blood pressure. If it's painful periods with women, same cause. If you are sleepless, restless, nervous, it's blood congestion—blood pressure. That surely is a certainty, for Dr. Shoop's Headache Tablets stop it in 20 minutes, and the tablets simply distribute the unnatural blood pressure.

Bruiise your finger, and doesn't it get red, and swell, and pain you? Of course it does. It's congestion, blood pressure. You'll find it where pain is—always. It's simply Common Sense.

We sell at 25 cents, and cheerfully recommend

Bermuda the Onionless.

If you just go to Bermuda for the onions, you had better stay at home, because all the onions are exported. But if you can make up your mind to do without onions you will have a splendid time. In the first place, there are no railroads and—oh, blessed thought!—no trolleys on the islands. You can forget the hurry and the fret and rest tired nerves. You can bathe; you can sail on the wonderfully clear, still water within the rampart of coral; you can fish and look through water glasses thirty feet down on the teeming life under sea. The Bermuda boats are rigged with something which is almost a balloon jib and a leg-o'-mutton, or jib headed mainsail, and they are of deep draft. But they work pretty handily and will stand up and sail fast in rough water, so that you can take them out beyond the protected water without fear.—Travel Magazine.

I'll stop your pain free. To show you first—before you spend a penny—what my Pink Pain Tablets can do, I will mail you a free, a Trial Package of them—Dr. Shoop's Headache Tablets. Neuralgia, Headache, Toothache, Period pains, etc., are due to blood congestion. Dr. Shoop's Headache Tablets simply kill pain by coaxing away the unnatural blood pressure. That is all. Address Dr. Shoop, Racine, Wis. Sold by all dealers.

Why They Cheered.

Dr. Whewell, master of Trinity college, Cambridge, was a great but unpopular man. When he entered the senate house it was the ill mannered practice of the undergraduates to begin a loud and continuous whistle. "How this originated I do not know," writes Dean Farrar in his book, "Men I Have Known." "There were two legends about it. One was that it originated that the master would have to whistle for a bishopric; the other, equally absurd, was that when some one had asked him how to pronounce his name he had said, 'You must shape your mouth as if you were going to whistle.'"

But under the rough manners of the students there was genuine goodness of heart. Dr. Whewell's wife died. He had been tenderly devoted to her, and when he attended chapel after her death the undergraduates were touched by an "old man's anguish and a strong man's tears."

"When next he entered the senate house," writes Dean Farrar, "there was dead silence. For the first time for I know not how many years not a whistle was heard, and then a moment afterward, by spontaneous impulse the whole crowded mass of undergraduates in the gallery burst into a loud and long continued cheer. It was not astonishing that such a proof of sympathy should move the heart of the great master or that the tears should run down his cheeks. I do not think that he was ever whistled at again."

CATARRH CAN BE CURED

Kill the Germs by Breathing Hy-O-mei—Gives Quick Relief.

Many people who have suffered with catarrh for years naturally think they cannot be cured, and become discouraged.

The reason they have failed of cure is because they have not treated the disease with the local remedy, Hy-O-mei, which is breathed through a neat pocket inhaler so that its healing medicated air reaches the most remote air-cells, kills all catarrh germs and restores the mucous membrane of the nose, throat and lungs to a healthy condition.

Catarrh is really a local disease and to cure it, it must be treated by a remedy which reaches every spot in the nose and throat where the disease germs lodge. Hy-O-mei does this and gives relief from the first day's use.

A complete Hy-O-mei outfit costs but $1.00 and F. W. Jordan gives a guarantee with every package to refund the money unless it cures.

Was in Poor Health For Years.

Ira W. Kelley, of Mansfield, Pa., writes: "I was in poor health for two years, suffering from kidney and bladder trouble, and spent considerable money consulting physicians without obtaining any marked benefit, but was cured by Foley's Kidney Cure, and I desire to add my testimony that it may be the cause of restoring the health of others." Hats in Olden Days.

The felt hat is as old as Homer. The Greeks made them in skullcaps, conical, truncated, narrow or broad brimmed. The Phrygian bonnet was an elevated cap without a brim, the apex turned over in front. It is known as the cap of liberty. An ancient figure of Liberty in the times of Antonius Livius, A. D. 115, holds the cap in the right hand. The Persians wore soft caps. Plumed hats were the head-dress of the Syrian corps of Xerxes. The broad brim was worn by the Macedonian kings. Castor means a beaver. The Armenian captive wore a plumed hat. The merchants of the fourteenth century wore a Flanders beaver. Charles VII. in 1490 wore a felt hat lined with red and plumed. The English men and women in 1510 wore close woolen or knitted caps. Two centuries ago hats were worn in the house. Pepys in his diary wrote, "September, 1664, got a severe cold because he took off his hat at dinner," and again in January, 1665, he got another cold by taking too long with his head bare to allow his wife's maid to comb his hair and wash his ears, and Lord Clarendon in his essay, speaking of the decay of respect due the aged, says that in his younger days he never kept his hat on before those older than himself except at dinner.

The Childish Voice Too Much.

A good story is told of Signor Foll, the famous basso. Once upon a time he was singing "The Raft," when a childish voice from somewhere in the stalls suddenly piped in and attempted to organize an impromptu duet. Unfortunately the next line of the song was: "Hark! What sound is that which breaks upon mine ear?" This so tickled the fancy of the great vocalist that he burst into a hearty fit of laughter and left the platform, followed by the pianist. Twice they came back and attempted the song, and finally they had to give it up in despair, much to the amusement of the audience.

Many Kinds of Days in One.

A mean solar day is the average or mean of all the apparent solar days in a year. Mean solar time is that shown by a well regulated clock or watch, while apparent solar time is that shown by a well constructed sun dial. The difference between the two at any time is the equation of time and may amount to sixteen minutes and twenty-one seconds. The astronomical day begins at noon and the civil day at the preceding midnight. The sidereal and mean solar days are both invariable, but one day of the latter is equal to 1 day 3 minutes and 56.555 seconds of the former.

A Safe Perch.

At the crowded downtown corner the frightened pedestrians were scurrying out of the way of street cars, automobiles, delivery wagons and policemen on horseback.

"Gosh," exclaimed the window washer, looking down on them from his perch on the narrow ledge of a fifteen story window, "I'm glad I ain't in that crowd!"—Chicago Tribune.

Often The Kidneys Are Weakened by Over-Work.

Unhealthy Kidneys Make Impure Blood.

It used to be considered that only urinary and bladder troubles were to be traced to the kidneys, but now modern science proves that nearly all diseases have their beginning in the disorder of these most important organs.

The kidneys filter and purify the blood—that is their work.

Therefore, when your kidneys are weak or out of order, you can understand how quickly your entire body is affected and how every organ seems to fail to do its duty.

If you are sick or "feel badly," begin taking the great kidney remedy, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, because as soon as your kidneys are well they will help all the other organs to health. A trial will convince anyone.

If you are sick you can make no mistake by first doctoring your kidneys. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy, is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases, and is sold on its merits by all druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles. You may have a sample bottle of Swamp-Root by mail free, also a pamphlet telling you how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. Mention this paper when writing to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

Professor and Dead Letter.

By Nellie Cravey Gilmore.

Copyrighted, 1907, by P. C. Eastment.

Belinda's introduction to the new professor was a distinctly unceremonious one. Tripping lightly across the mud sogged pavement, she suddenly caught one foot in a tangled heap of wire—sung down from the telephone and telegraph lines by the ravaging hand of a recent hurricane—and stumbled precipitately into the arms of a blond giant, who supported her valorously till she had blushing recovered her poise.

"Thanks, awfully," she said. "You have doubtless saved my life."
"Your frock, more likely," he replied, lifting his hat. "I am no end glad I happened along at the propitious moment."

Belinda returned him a little combination smile and nod as she lifted her dainty, crisp skirts and pursued her way cautiously across the slippery street.

Hardiman restrained his eagerness until a reasonably safe length of time had elapsed before turning to look around. He had gained the opposite sidewalk by this time, and his glance back at the girl betrayed instantly to the casual pedestrians that the professor had been abruptly shaken from his phlegmatic attitude of mind.

Belinda turned into Oak street all unconscious of the scrutiny that followed her, and Hardiman continued his way in a tumult of chaotic reflections. He reached his hotel in a state of mind that was quite impossible. The very first look into the girl's face had thrilled him startlingly. The accidental contact of her delicate form against his had finished the job. He told himself that it was a case of love at first sight. So much for the explosion of his lifelong theories! Then a perfect regiment of doubts and fears assailed him. Perhaps after all she was not a girl, but a married woman.

The professor ate his dinner in silence. Afterward he went to his room and for some inexplicable reason exchanged his dark suit for one of lighter and more becoming texture. He brushed his hair painstakingly, placed a soft gray alpaca hat on his head and sauntered forth in quest of fresh air. It was almost dark before he returned, disappointed and oddly depressed. He eschewed supper altogether and went back to his room for a solitary cigar and meditation.

Meanwhile Belinda had reached home, put on a pair of dry boots and settled herself for a quiet afternoon. School would open on Monday, and she would not have many more afternoons to lounge, as they would be given over to outdoor recreation after the trying hours of the morning. The town clock, striking 6, aroused her. She tore up the last letter, old love letters they were, and tossed the bits into the grate. Then she made a careful toilet and went downstairs to dinner. Teddy Everett was coming over that evening, she recollected, but for the first time in many months the prospect of a visit from that individual gave her no particular pleasure.

Sunday morning she selected her most becoming gown and hat. It was a perfect day, and her satisfaction was almost complete. She created the usual stir as she walked up the aisle of the village church and took her seat near the front. Less than five minutes afterward the professor came in and sat down in the pew opposite. He had been waiting outside half the morning, unobserved, but alert. After service Belinda gave him a fleeting smile of recognition and for some reason that was new to her turned and hurried home as fast as her pretty patent leather covered feet could carry her.

When school opened the following day, the first person she encountered on entering the faculty hall was the new professor. She blushed to her ears and tried valiantly to retain her scholarly demeanor, but the dogged crimson showed persistently through the tanned cheeks, and her eyes were puzzled.

Hardiman made no effort to conceal his gratification, or, if he did, he was not at all successful. The rest of the teachers looked on in good natured amusement. None of them were old maids.

In a month the acquaintance grew to intimacy. In two it became a serious proposition. After three the only thing lacking were the words and the ring.

The professor had at last made up his mind to propose. He had meant to restrain his ardor till the close of the term, but when it became manifest that the adorable little instructor of grade No. 4 reciprocated his affectional prudence was thrown to the winds. He sat in his study pondering. Suddenly he got to work disposing of his reports in short, but, thorough, order. He made a point of never slighting his duties for anything. Then he drew forth a square envelope and sheet of white paper to match. This seemed to him the most direct and final way of settling matters between them. Belinda was a coquette, there was no getting around that fact, even in one's most generous moments, and Hardiman was determined to corner her completely. He composed his lines carefully; they were inspirational. And now that he had broken the ice at last he meant to carry things to a rapid finish. The professor was nothing if not businesslike. He fished in a drawer and pulled out a teacher's resignation blank. This he put in a separate envelope and directed both to the dearest girl in the world.

The following morning the postman's shrill whistle brought Belinda herself to the door. She took the mail and glanced through it hastily, rivers of scarlet flowing over her cheeks as she recognized Hardiman's familiar handwriting. She tore open the envelope eagerly and scanned the contents with whitening face. The paper, tell from her fingers, and she leaned limply against the banister rail. So she was asked, in the briefest possible way, to resign, and she had dared to dream—she had been so sure—she had been such a fool! She smothered the sob in her throat and in quick scorn of herself dashed the hot tears from her eyes. Then she pulled herself together sharply and went upstairs. With trembling fingers she filled out the blank and directed it to the board.

Drab weeks followed. Every effort the professor made to gain an audience with Belinda failed. He had mortified and insulted her flagrantly, and she would see that he got no more chances to repeat the indignity. As to Hardiman, he was on the rack. Fool-like, he reflected, he had rushed in and frightened her away with his maudlin, importunate lovelornness, and thus lost her for good. But perhaps, after all, it was not for him that she cared, but the other fellow! What a dolt he had been to presume upon the affection of a matchless creature like that! Life grew to be a bitter struggle to him, and he began all at once to look his thirty-five years.

It was in May, almost the close of school. The day was warm and oppressive, and a lazy breeze was blowing. The professor made his way in absent weariness toward the school-house, stopping on the way to get his mail from the postoffice. There were several circulars in his box and his breath stopped—a communication from the dead letter office. He broke the seal anxiously, an intuitive knowledge of what it contained making his heart thump thickly. Sure enough: "Miss Belinda Maxwell, Greenville, Colo."

And this was Alabama! Unadulterated, blue labeled carelessness and stupidity! If living in a place five years could make one responsible for an idiotic blunder of this sort, what else had he not done? He walked out of the postoffice in a daze. All was clear enough now. She had never received his letter at all, only that wretched, confounded blank! No wonder she had frozen the very air about him—no wonder! Out in the open air, he quickened his footsteps. It was already 8:20, only ten minutes before the opening of school, but he turned directly into Oak street and forgot that he had ever been such a thing as principal of the Greenville High school.

In the distance he caught sight of a familiar blue tailor made gown. He doubled his pace and was quite up with Belinda before she realized his nearness. To her haughty glance, her cool drawing away from him, Hardiman paid no attention whatever, but thrust the letter into her hands in a determined, masterful way which she could not resist.

Hypnotized, she opened it and read the lines through, the crimson showing in her cheeks:

My Darling—I want you to give up teaching and let me do it for both. I am not mistaken in thinking that you will come to me. Just a line, giving me the right to speak, and I shall attempt to tell you in a different way, in a thousand different ways, how much I worship you. Most earnestly, R. W. H.

Belinda caught her breath in something between a sob and a laugh as she lifted her eyes shyly to his keen, appealing, apologizing and at last commanding glance.

The professor was tardy, very tardy, that morning, but he gave his excuse of a headache glibly and mendaciously and dismissed pupils and teachers for a holiday.

This he spent with Belinda.

The Land of Noises.
"In China night is as alive as day and is filled with whoops, noisy conversations, the singsong accompanying work, boisterous repartee and every other unmusical sound," says a writer in the Montreal Standard. "In addition, the darkness is one long howl of dogs, cackle of geese, braying of donkeys, croaking of frogs, the squealing of pigs, the drumbeats of the policeman and even, as some one has said, 'the singing of the stars.' Individually the people are full of varieties of unsuppressed violent demonstrativeness, and collectively they are only a terrific tribal turbulence. One most appropriate name for China has never been given it. It has been called the Yellow Kingdom, the Middle Kingdom, the Celestial empire, the Pigtail nation, the Sleepy Giant and others. No one of these is more applicable than the nation of noises. Noise is seemingly the first element of Chinese life and has been cultivated for centuries by Chinese talent and in conception, development and execution presents not only new varieties, but scores of new species."

The Bright Butler.
A few days ago one of Philadelphia's prominent society women told her butler to tell all visitors that she was not at home. At night, when enumerating the persons who had called during the day, he mentioned the lady's sister, when his mistress exclaimed: "I told you, man, that I was always at home for my sister! You ought to have shown her in."

Next day the lady went out to make a few calls, and during her absence her sister came to the house.

"Is your mistress at home?" she asked the butler.

"Yes, madam," was the reply.

The lady went upstairs and looked everywhere for her sister. On coming downstairs she said to the butler, "My sister must have gone out, for I cannot find her."

"Yes, madam, she has gone out, but she told me last night that she was always at home to you."—Philadelphia Record.

Her Choice Tea.
There is a true story told of a wealthy American lady who was in China and one of the court officials, wishing to do her great honor, promised to send her a casket containing some extraordinary tea. In due time an exquisitely packed box arrived containing tea. She bade many of her society friends to a series of afternoons, at which this tea was served, its delicious qualities expatiated upon and all seemingly enjoyed the beverage.

At the end of the season when the casket was almost empty she found a very small beautifully decorated box, which on opening contained the price—tea. What she had used was the dried tea leaves that had been used probably time and again by coolies. It seems that rare and costly tea is packed in tea to preserve the aroma and flavor. It was such a rich joke upon herself that the hostess told the story, and the society set had a good laugh.—Chicago Record-Herald.

The Literal Mind.
All orders to native servants in India must be literally given, for in that manner they will be received. A missionary once took a country lad as a servant when going out on a boating journey. As there are no lavatories on board the country boats, one's ablutions have to be performed in a very simple manner, an ordinary bucket serving as a wash bowl. The boy was told to bring some water and in doing so happened to spill a little on the floor. "Why don't you throw it all over?" asked the missionary jocosely.

"The," said the lad, and immediately, to his master's astonishment, took up the pail and emptied it over his employer's head.

Free Medical Advice.

A well known London physician at a dinner party one evening was much worried by one who was seeking gratuitous advice. "Do you know, doctor," said his questioner, "I know a man who suffers so terribly with indigestion that at times he can do nothing but howl with pain. What would you do in that case?"

"Well, I suppose," responded the medical man, "I should howl with pain too."—Westminster Gazette.

Flabbergasted Pa.
"Ah, pater, I am no end glad to be home from college."

"What's that?"

"I am jolly well pleased, y'know."

"Thank, clean out the old stall! There's a new critter on the place."—Leedsville Courier-Journal.

A Good Imitation.

The other day an amateur artist was producing some rapid sketches to amuse his children. He drew a sketch of a hen so naturally that when it was afterward thrown in the waste paper basket it laid there.

War Against Consumption.

All nations are endeavoring to check the ravages of consumption, the "white plague" that claims so many victims each year. Foley's Honey and Tar cures coughs and colds perfectly and you are in no danger of consumption. Do not risk your health by taking some unknown preparation when Foley's Honey and Tar is safe and certain in results. The genuine is in a yellow package. Ed. D. Heckerman.

How Burbank Achieves Perfection.

In his method of working, Burbank is quick and decided. It was his privilege to be with him during one morning in his "proving-grounds" at Sebastopol, some seven miles from his home. Row after row of young plum-trees, covered with fruit, stood before us. Two assistants were with us, one with a handful of white cords and one with a handful of brown or black ones. "These are all grown from the same seed. Now see how they differ." He picked a few plums from the first tree. Rapidly he looked at one, carefully tasted it, and said, "Kill." I had scarcely got my teeth into the first plum when he was on to the next tree, and the next, and the next, with a rapidity that was simply astounding. His keen eyes, trained to scientific accuracy, saw at what seemed to me to be one glance all the attributes of the tree. One taste satisfied him as to texture, juiciness, and flavor of the fruit, and thus, almost in a moment, he had decided whether that tree was worth keeping for further experimentation or was to go to the bonfire. Almost as fast as I can write it the words fell from his lips, "Kill," "Keep," "Keep," "Kill," "Kill," "Keep." The attendants followed, and put on the white or black strings which denoted the fate of the particular tree. From "A Little Visit to the Home of Luther Burbank," by George W. James, in the August Circle.

"BLUE DEVILS"

Get Rid of Indigestion and Things Will Look Bright and Joyous.

Everything looks gloomy and dark to the person suffering with indigestion.

Until the prescription known as Mi-o-na stomach tablets was put up in popular form as a safe and effective cure for sick headache, indigestion and stomach troubles, the "blue devils" made everything look dark, gloomy and depressing.

After a few days' use of Mi-o-na the sick headache, dizzy feeling, drowsiness, bad taste in the mouth, distress after eating—all these symptoms of a weak stomach—will disappear, and with perfect digestion there will be a joyous and beautiful outlook.

Mi-o-na stomach tablets are sold only in a neat metal box convenient for the vest pocket and cost 50 cents. W. Jordan has seen so many cures made by Mi-o-na stomach tablets that he gives a guarantee with every box that the money will be refunded if the remedy fails to give satisfaction. July 19-2t.

Household Helps

A dish of charcoal placed in the pantry will keep articles of food sweet and wholesome almost as well as ice. Change it once in every ten days when the weather is warm.

When making a cake always remember that the sugar and butter should be beaten to a cream, then the beaten yolks of the eggs added, then the milk, next the flavoring, the beaten whites, and lastly the flour and baking powder.

The economical housewife purchases dried fruits such as apricots, raisins, dates, figs, etc., by the box. Not only are they bought much cheaper in this way, but are very much cleaner than fruits which stand in a store, usually uncovered.

When fanning an invalid, if a few drops of aromatic spirits of ammonia be sprinkled upon the fan it will be found very refreshing.

To set colors in new cotton fabrics dissolve one ounce of sugar of lead in eight quarts of water, and soak the articles in it over night.

During the summer kidney irregularities are often caused by excessive drinking or being overheated. Attend to the kidneys at once by using Foley's Kidney Cure. Ed. D. Heckerman.

To Clean Pillows

Feather pillows may be freshened and the feathers made light by placing them out of doors in a clean spot during a hard rain. Let them be thoroughly wet and then hang in a warm place to dry. Spots on the pillow cover may be removed with a paste of water and Fuller's earth.

Another way to clean the feathers is to place them in a cheese cloth bag and wash them in warm soap water, followed by several rinsings in clean water. Feathers should never be placed in the sun.

Lace Renovation

To make old black lace look as good as new take equal parts of milk and ink, dip the lace in it, then partly dry it and iron it on the wrong side between a piece of folded linen.

England's National Color.

Why red should have been selected as the national color becomes intelligible when we look at the cross of St. George. Sir Walter Scott, when he wrote of how "their own sea hath welm'd those red cross powers," was merely anticipating the phrase of today. But Oliver Cromwell, when for the first time he put the English soldier in a red coat, probably did as much as St. George to monopolize red as the national color. The aggressive color has, however, many meanings and has lent itself to many uses. In the days of the Romans when it flared on the head of a slave it stood for freedom; in the days of the French revolution it stood for freedom backed by blows, while in the streets of the city today the red cross stands for succor. So far back as the reign of Henry II. there was a red book of the exchequer, a record of the names of all who held lands "per baroniam," and at this moment persons of consequence in the service of the state find their names entered in a red book.—London Chronicle.

Curious Marriage Customs.

Wedding customs in Serbia, that little kingdom in Europe, are curious indeed from an American standpoint. For instance, neither the bride nor the bridegroom is the most important figure in a Servian wedding, but the best man takes the leading part. He carefully guards the bride all the day before the wedding takes place, and sleeps outside her chamber the night before the girl is to be married. He wears a big stiff sash made of heavy silk, carries a big white staff and a huge bouquet all for himself. There are no bridesmaids, but two god-fathers, each of whom presents to the bride a silk dress. After the priest has performed the ceremony the best man takes the bride around the church and she kisses all her girl friends goodbye and is finally carried off to the bridegroom, who at last gets his wife from the hands of the best man. Then the happy couple return to their intended home. Bridal tours are foreign to Servian ideas and only the very rich or the nobility indulge in them.

Stimulation Without Irritation

That is the watchword. That is what Orino Laxative Fruit Syrup does. Cleanses and stimulates the bowels without irritation in any form. Ed. D. Heckerman.

Apricot Sherbet

Select a good brand of canned apricots and remove the fruit from the syrup. With a sharp knife remove all the skin from the fruit and cut the apricots in small pieces. Return the fruit to the syrup, add two cups of sugar and a little less than a quart of water. Stir well together and freeze. Serve in sherbet glasses and pass sponge cake with it, unless it is used between the meat and salad or game course.

Quick Relief for Asthma Sufferers

Foley's Honey and Tar affords immediate relief to asthma sufferers in the worst stages and if taken in time will effect a cure. Ed. D. Heckerman.

Inseparable Carlyle.

A lady who lived near Thomas Carlyle kept Cochon China fowls, and their crowing was such a nuisance that the philosopher sent a complaint to her. The owner was indignant upon hearing the appeal.

"Why," said she, "they crow only four times a day, and how can Mr. Carlyle be seriously annoyed at that?"

Upon hearing of her attitude upon the subject Carlyle replied, "The lady forgets the pain I suffer in waiting for those four crows."

Once Too Often.

"What's all this excitement about?" "Nothing worth mentioning. Man got knocked down."

"Accident?"

"Not exactly. One of these men who always catch hold of you and push you out of their way when you happen to meet them at a crowded corner grabbed the wrong man just now. That's all."—Chicago Tribune.

Saving Time.

Father (to his son, early in the morning)—"What is the meaning of this? You are lying in bed with your clothes on. Son (a student)—Yes, father, I do that so that if I oversleep myself I shall not be late at college.—Meggen-dorfer Blatter.

A Letter Delivers Two Messages

One is contained in the written words; the other in the paper. One expresses the writer's thoughts; the other, the writer's taste. The message that carries is one of refinement. The next best thing to knowing what is correct in a writing paper is to know a dealer who knows. We know, and we have the papers in Eaton's line. Let us show them to you.
